

Da Nang Air Collision: 64 Die

SHUTEYE FOR GIs—Having lived up to the tradition of "mud-sloggers", three GIs catch 40 winks during break in patrol in the Song Be area recently. Official Saigon sources reported that the Viet Cong and North

Vietnamese are anticipating a long war and are already planning a Winter-Spring offensive. (UPI TELEPHOTO BY STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER SHUNSUKE AKATSUKA)

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP)—A U.S. Air Force jet fighter and an Air Vietnam DC4 passenger plane collided over the Da Nang airfield today and initial reports said 64 persons aboard the DC4 or on the ground were killed.

Both Americans in the F4 Phantom jet survived—the navigator parachuted safely and the pilot managed to land the damaged fighter-bomber on the airstrip.

Witnesses reported the collision occurred at an altitude of about 300 feet and that the four-engine propeller plane ripped into a patch of rice paddies and cultivated fields just 200 yards from the densely populated village of Hao Vang.

U.S. and South Vietnamese rescue teams rushed to the site. The passenger plane was flying to Da Nang from Saigon.

Earlier reports from helicopter crewmen who flew over the crash site said they had seen people moving away from the wreckage.

Al Adams of New York City, the Hoa Vang district adviser, said rescue teams counted 64 bodies.

"Several of these were men and women who were on the ground working in the fields," he said.

He added that all of the victims appeared to be Vietnamese.

AP photographer Hugh Van Es said both wings were ripped from the fuselage and wreckage was strewn over a 100 yard section of torn earth. There were indications that a fire had broken out in the cockpit area, he said.

South Vietnamese police said some of the bodies were burned.

The passenger plane crashed right wingtip down," he said.

A platoon of Vietnamese soldiers searched the area for bodies.

A U.S. soldier working at the air base said he looked up moments after the accident and saw the DC4 veer sharply to the right.

"It seemed to stall out and headed for the ground with its right wingtip down," he said.

Foreign Ministers Meet on Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Abba Eban, then joins foreign ministers from the Soviet Union, France and Britain for dinner with U.N. Secretary-General U Thant.

The morning session, at the headquarters of the U.S. mission to the United Nations by the foreign affairs chiefs from the United States, South Vietnam, South Korea, Thailand, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand, is another periodic review of the war effort. The last one was held in May in Bangkok, Thailand.

Since then, President Nixon has ordered two U.S. troop withdrawals totaling 60,000 men, the war has gone into and out of a lull, North Vietnam's President Ho Chi Minh has died, South Vietnam has reshuffled its cabinet and the Paris peace talks have remained deadlocked.

On Friday at the United Nations, Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign minister, rebuffed President Nixon's plea the day before to help "persuade Hanoi to move seriously into negotiations which could end the war."

Informants said there was no agenda for the meeting this morning.

One of the participants, New Zealand's Keith Holyoake, followed Gromyko in the U.N. General Assembly policy debate Friday and defended the allied position.

He said the allies have made fair offers at Paris while negotiators for the other side have responded only with "the demands of men who seek to impose their will by force."

Gromyko denounced what he portrayed as outside aggression against the Vietnamese, praised Moscow's aid to Hanoi and the Viet Cong and defended their peace proposals.

U.S. diplomats said Gromyko's speech was not harsh in tone but neither did it show much promise for a breakthrough in outstanding East-West issues.

Gromyko made no direct reply to U.S. proposals for an early start on the limitations of nuclear offensive and defensive weapons. He reiterated, however, that the Soviet Union continues to favor such talks but mentioned no date or place.

U Thant said such talks should begin immediately and urged the two superpowers to halt the development of new weapons systems while they are in progress.

The secretary general's appeal was made as part of his annual report to the assembly. It came as Rogers and Gromyko prepared for meetings next week to discuss arms limitations and other topics.

On the Middle East, Gromyko denounced "Israel's obstruction of any steps toward a political settlement." But Israeli minister Eban countered this charge in a later speech.

"The Soviet Union played a sinister role in the developments leading up to the 1967 war" and "Mr. Gromyko's speech this morning reveals no intention to depart from these attitudes," Eban told the assembly.

Eban proposed that United Nations Day, Oct. 24, be proclaimed a day of universal cease-fire, in Vietnam, Nigeria, the Middle East, along the Soviet-Chinese border and elsewhere, to provide "a moment of serenity" that might help peace efforts.

An Arab spokesman Iraqi delegate Tari El Erris said, "Eban's statement was mere rhetoric."

U Thant's dinner for Rogers, Gromyko, Britain's Michael Stewart and France's Maurice Schuman was part of the repeated search for a solution in the Middle East conflict. Big Four talks on the subject have been in recess over the summer.

See Reds Digging in for Long War

SAIGON (UPI)—The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese appear ready to fight a long war and are already planning a winter-spring campaign, official sources said today.

The sources said they believed a Communist strategy for a long war would rely mostly on shelling and small unit attacks which would conserve Communist manpower. They said Communist infiltration into the South this year totaled an estimated 100,000 men.

The current autumn campaign, they said, will probably last through October and will be followed by a winter-spring campaign. It is already in the planning, the sources said.

The predictions came as the Six Green Beret officers awaiting trial for the alleged slaying of a Vietnamese double agent, declined to discuss their case. Story on page 14.

North Vietnamese Communist newspaper charged the United States is "maintaining its war tempo."

"As long as the Americans are stubborn, we will fight," the newspaper Nhan Dan said.

On the battlefronts, Communist gunners shelled 21 allied targets throughout Vietnam overnight. The attacks killed one American and wounded seven.

One American was killed and eight wounded Friday when North Vietnamese troops tossing grenades attacked a U.S. Marine position near the demilitarized zone.

The Marines killed three of the attackers. The rest fled.

Communists said two U.S. Army light helicopters were shot down by Communist ground fire Friday. One American was injured when one chopper went down 71 miles west of Saigon. Another was hurt in a similar crash 53 miles northwest of the capital.

Viet Cong terrorists blew up two trucks near the home of deputy U.S. Ambassador Samuel D. Berger Friday night, police sources said today.

The terrorists bombed a South Vietnamese government truck first, then a U.S. Navy truck about 25 minutes later. There were no injuries in either blast but both vehicles were destroyed.

Berger Replacing Bunker

It was not known whether Berger was home at the time. He is taking over for Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, who is vacationing in the United States.

In the heaviest fighting Friday, troops of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division fought a Communist force for five hours near Cu Chi 22 miles northeast of Saigon. They killed 20 Communists and captured two. The Americans suffered no casualties.

Communists troops kept the pressure on the 3rd Marine Division, which is to be withdrawn under President Nixon's latest troop pullout announcement. In an attack on one of the 3rd division's units near the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), a military spokesman said the Communists killed one Marine and wounded eight. The Marines killed three of the Communists.

Third Division Toll

The 3rd Marine Division lost 25 men killed in two outbreaks of fighting Wednesday, also near the DMZ.

U.S. paratroopers eight miles south of Hue found a mass grave Friday. It contained bodies of 150 Vietnamese in civilian clothing. The bodies were believed to be those of civilians reported missing during the 1968 lunar New Year Communist offensive.

U.S. B52 bombers dropped 350 tons of bombs on suspected Communist positions in a series of raids that ended today.

South Vietnamese military spokesmen said government troops killed 42 guerrillas in sporadic fighting Friday near Tinh Bien, 110 miles west of Saigon in the Mekong Delta where U.S. troops have pulled out, leaving most of the war to the Saigon government.

Nixon: Draft at 19 Starting in January

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon plans to thrust the draft onto the 19-year-olds starting Jan. 1, regardless of Congress' action on his request.

FEDERAL POST—Eugene A. Guldge, shown at his office, has been named by President Nixon to be Commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration and Assistant Secy. of Housing and Urban Development. Guldge, 49, is a Greensboro, N.C., home builder and president of the National Association of Home-builders.

ed reform legislation by then. It appears Congress will not be able to act fast enough to make the legal reform Nixon requested Friday. The President announced a cut of 50,000 men from draft calls for the rest of this year. But the administration has at least two other plans it can use.

In the House, chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., said his Armed Services Committee will take up Nixon's draft lottery proposal by November. But a check indicated there was some disagreement within the committee which might delay the proposal.

In the Senate, Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said he saw little prospect of a reform measure making it through Congress this year. He said the Senate Armed Services Committee already is backlogged with business.

The basic point of Nixon's reform plan is that young men will be prime draft bait only during the year after their 19th birthday, instead of the present seven-year span from 19 to 26. Those with college deferments would run the risk during the year after they graduate.

The lottery Nixon has asked Congress to approve would work this way: Once each year

Selective Service headquarters would, in effect, put the 365 days of the year in a fishbowl and draw them out one-by-one to create a scrambled calendar. The first date on this calendar might be Aug. 4, followed by Sept. 4, Dec. 3, March 8 or any other dates.

All 19-year-olds whose birthday happened to be the first day chosen for the scrambled calendar would be at the top of the pile. Those with birthdays on the second calendar date would be next.

The Selective Service then would start drawing, from the top of the pile, each time there was a draft quota. Those halfway down the pile might never be called, and those at the bottom probably would be assured of never being called.

After 12 months, the process would start all over again, with a new calendar. Those who turned 20 would be out of the pool.

If Congress does not pass that plan, Nixon probably will use his executive powers to go to a plan that each month would call up the oldest 19-year-olds—those closest to their 20th birthdays. The result would be that men would be most vulnerable to a draft call in the month before their 20th birthday.

'Roller Skating' at Forsyth Park

These two boys have a long way to go if they plan to do any roller skating at the rink in Forsyth Park. Elmer Carney, Republican candidate for alderman in the ward, pointed out that the rink is being used as a dumping ground for stumps and debris. He has called for a general cleanup program in the park. The two boys are trying to help out. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

County School Administrators Facing Big Challenge

By BRUCE KAUFMAN
NEW PALTZ

School administrators in the southern section of Ulster County, like their counterparts throughout the county and the state, are at the threshold of, as one official put it, the "greatest challenge in the history of public education."

This challenge is derived from the contrasting facts that these school districts, and likewise, all school districts, are experiencing steady and sometimes mushrooming growth while at the same time, discovering that their traditional revenue sources are evaporating.

The four school districts, which sprawl across the southern tier from Highland and Marlboro on the Hudson to Ellenville at the foot of the Catskills, service nearly 8,000 children in eight townships.

All these districts—the Highland, Marlboro, New Paltz, and Ellenville Central School Districts—in addition to sharing similar problems, are surprisingly similar in size and in the scope of their educational program.

All four have approximately 2,000 children, professional staffs between 100 to 130, educational budgets of from two and one half to three million dollars, and approximately three major school facilities per district.

Similarly, all are overcrowded, seeking to expand, and growing by five to 10 per cent each year, on the one hand, while having to cope with cutbacks in state aid and a mounting taxpayer revolt, on the other hand.

Richard Hayden, superintendent of the Ellenville Central School District, was expressing an evaluation similar to his colleagues on the other side of the Shawangunks, when he told The Freeman that "all of our schools are packed."

Special

Ellenville, however, is considerably more fortunate than Highland, where overcrowding has necessitated placing two elementary school grades on split sessions.

School administrators from all four districts feel that the only way to offset the overcrowding is to undertake expansion plans, funded by taxpayer approved bonds.

However, such proposals have been meeting with little success when presented to the voters at referendums and officials are not optimistic about the future.

Recent indications of this "taxpayers revolt" were experienced in both the New Paltz and Marlboro districts, where modest sized school bond issues were soundly defeated. Highland has been somewhat luckier, having recently approved a bond for the construction of a new K-4 elementary school. And even this proposal was turned down twice before finally receiving approval.

Another fiscal problem facing the schools is the recent cutbacks of state aid.

While the impact of these cutbacks has not profoundly affected this year's educational program, officials from all four districts have expressed apprehension about the 1970-71 school year when the budget cuts are slated to be expanded.

As one official put it "we are experiencing the lull before the storm."

With state aid being cut back and taxpayers standing firm against increased assessments and costly bond issues, administrators, according to Hayden, will be confronted with their greatest challenge since the schools were centralized in the 1930's.

And most school administrators agree that if this challenge is not met there will be a true crisis in public education.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOOD IISHMAEL

William Gargan was a leading figure in the American theater, movies and television for over 35 years. He played many notable roles, but none as great as the one he has played since cancer robbed him of his larynx in 1960. His indomitable faith and love of God and people gave him his new role.

He got his "second voice" thanks to a method called esophageal speech and he has dedicated his life since then to giving hope, courage and faith to others afflicted as he was. He has travelled hundreds of thousands of miles as spokesman for the American Cancer Society, encouraging and establishing rehabilitation programs.

When he lost his voice from cancer, Bill tells his audiences, he said, "God, why me?" and then on reflection with his faith he said, "Why not me, God?" and he has gone on to prove "Why not me, God?" He has turned a personal tragedy into a rewarding and fulfilling career in service to others.

Upon receiving an award from Division 22 of the American Psychological Association at a banquet in Washington, D.C. for his outstanding contributions he said "... We must keep our faith and trust when God says no."

Cuban Refugee Tells Tale Of Sharks, Thirst, Horror

MIAMI (AP) — The survivor of a beach here Friday afternoon, of a raft ride from Cuba told "I saw the beach and I Friday of one companion falling thought it was still Cuba," Feramid circling sharks and anro told a Miami Herald reporter other—driven insane by thirst—from a hospital bed. "Someone who 'threw himself to die at shouted to me, and I asked him, 'are you a Russian? He said, 'No, American,' and I knew I was safe."

Oscar Camp Ferro, 20, suffer burns on arms he used as pad. Ferro washed ashore clinging dies, recounted the horrors of to an inner tube—all that was the five-day trip which ended on left of a raft fashioned from three tubes lashed to wooden boards when the three men left Santa Cruz del Norte on Sunday, he said.

"On Monday morning, I had a small can of milk. That's all I have eaten since we left," he said.

That day the raft overturned in rough water. The three men dismantled it and each grabbed an inner tube. Tuesday all was well. Then rough weather again struck.

"On Wednesday, Guillermo disappeared from sight. One minute he was there, and the next he was gone," said Ferro, who claimed he knew his companions only by their first names.

With sharks circling them, the two field hands in an effort to stick together, he said. But on Thursday Ferro found himself alone.

"Eduardo got very nervous," he said of his second friend. "He started shouting, 'water, water.' All of a sudden he went crazy and threw himself to die at sea. When I saw my friends disappear, I knew I would have to be strong, or I would die too."

Ferro, listed in serious condition, said he was an office worker in the Cuba National Institute of Fisheries who left the island nation because of "abuse and exploitation" by Fidel Castro's government.

Mark Yom Kippur; Day of Atonement

Jewish people all over the world will observe Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, as the most sacred day of the Jewish religious year is called, beginning Sunday evening.

The entire 24 hours are spent in prayer, fasting and atoning. The Sunday evening service begins with the famous Kol Nidre chant, the ago old melody that has become a well known musical masterpiece.

In this Kol Nidre service, the Jew declares his vows or promises made during the year to be annulled, if not fulfilled, signifying that man must be cautious with the outpouring of his words, for man's speech is a gift from God only to man, and he must therefore not use that speech for vain purposes. The prayers include a confession of sins, which the Jewish people may have committed and these sins are enumerated publicly, and forgiveness is asked.

It is believed that on this day, the Books of Life and Death that have been opened on Rosh Hashonah before the Heavenly Tribunal, are sealed and closed on Yom Kippur.

At Congregation Ahavath Israel, 100 Lucas Avenue, the Yom Kippur Eve Kol Nidre services will begin at 6:45 p. m. Rabbi Harry Z. Schectman will conduct the service and will deliver his sermon entitled, Building a Good World. The liturgy as well as the Kol Nidre will be chanted by Cantor David Katzen. The services Monday will begin at 9 a. m. At 11:30 a. m. Rabbi Schectman will deliver his sermon, Empty Spaces, which will be followed by the Yizkor, or memorial service.

The closing time for the entire service will be at 7:15 p. m. followed by a Break-the-Fast collation in the social hall. The synagogue is open to all who wish to join in prayer on this Holy Day.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Folks:

Let me tell you something that I learned years ago about serving coffee if you drink cream with it.

Now this takes time (about 30 seconds!), but it sure is different and makes the coffee so scrumptiously.

Pour your cup of coffee (if you use sugar put that in the bottom of the cup FIRST) and let stand at least ONE minute.

Take your coffee spoon and rest the bottom of it down in the liquid—DON'T DARE let any coffee get into the bowl of the spoon itself, but be absolutely sure that the base of the spoon is down in the hot liquid.

Pour your cream SLOWLY into that teaspoon.

The spoon will fill up with the cream and then slowly overflow. It will make a film of thick cream over the TOP of the coffee.

DO NOT STIR!

The cream will keep the coffee hot and it will have a completely different taste while you sip as long as your little heart desires. The cream sticks to your lips, but the coffee taste goes right down. The taste is so different!

It's a really wonderful way to impress a guest!

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise:

Strangers are nothing but friends we haven't met.

Dear Heloise:

I keep a bobby pin stuck on the inside of my screen door. This way I (or my guests) always have a ready spot to leave a note that the wind can't blow away.

No thumbtacks to mar the door, and the note is in plain view.

Barbara Swanson

Dear Heloise:

Many of us take one kind of pill or another, either while walking or away from home shopping. So here is a good hint to use.

I carry two plastic pill bottles—one larger than the other. I put my pills in the smaller one and cap it. Then place this in the larger bottle and cap that one.

The inside bottle contains the pills, of course, and the outside one I use for getting water. Frequently I can find a water fountain but nothing to put the water in.

And it's hard to get a pill down when leaning over a water fountain.

Maria Crownshield

Dear Heloise:

For years I've used silver cream polish on my silverware and when it became hard and dry, just threw it away. What a waste!

Now I add warm water and stir it until it's nice and creamy again. Works like new.

Mrs. A. J. Edwards

Dear Heloise:

When you're on crutches, it's usually your foot that is sore. And holding up that foot with a cast on it for a long time can give you aching muscles in the leg, thigh or stomach.

I took a heavy leather belt, attached it to the handbar of my crutch and was able to put my foot through the loop part of it that was hanging down like a hammock.

Gee, my stomach muscles sure felt better.

This belt can be adjusted as long or as short as one would want it according to how high or low you want your foot to be.

My therapist taught me this. Isn't it great?

Crip

Sure is. I checked this out and you are right. Do thank your therapist for us all, and let's hope you're soon up and at 'em again.

Mancuso - Krembrenk Wedding Announced

Miss Lucianne Mancuso, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Mancuso, Wawarsing, became the bride of James Krembrenk, foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hopper, High Falls, on Saturday, Sept. 13, at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Kerhonkson. The Rev. Father Budwick officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned with a stand-away collar and trumpet sleeves of alencon lace with hand-applied crystal beads and pearls. The skirt was slightly gathered and swept back to a full train of antique silk. A beaded lace crown held her fingertip veil and she carried a cascade of stephanotis, chrysanthemums and fern.

Mrs. Kathleen DeWitt, sister of the bride, acted as matron of honor. She wore a gold chiffon gown, styled with a scoop neckline and bishop sleeves. Embroidery trim of gold and cognac accented the gown. She carried a chain of yellow chrysanthemums with brown ribbon and rust daisy pom-poms.

Attendants were the Misses Patricia Mancuso, sister-in-law of the bride, Highland; Anita Mancuso, cousin of the bride, West Islip; Stephanie Mockovack and Linda Arnold, both of High Falls; and Carole Kirm, Wallington, N.J. Their cognac chiffon gowns were styled identically to that of the honor attendants, and they carried a similar chain of flowers in rust and yellow.

Miss Eileen Mancuso, niece of the bride, Highland, served as junior bridesmaid. Her gown and flowers were fashioned similarly to that of the other attendants.

Louis Krembrenk, High Falls, was best man for his brother. Ushers were Frank Mancuso, Highland; Robert Mancuso, Wawarsing; James Hopper, High Falls; Gregory DeWitt, Accord; and Carlos Santiago, Frank Mancuso, Highland, served as junior usher and Michael Mancuso was ringbearer.

A reception for 136 guests was held at the Walnut Grove, Kingston.

Upon their return from their wedding trip to Cape Cod, the couple will make their home at Albany.

Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST of the Emily Post Institute
STORE OWNERS ASKS THAT TOIS BE SUPERVISED

Very often a reader's letter expressed a sentiment or presents a plea far more eloquent than I can. This is true of Mrs. Barnes' letter and I can only ask that I hope you mothers will take heed and see that your children are more closely supervised.

A copy of Emily Post's Etiquette has been sent to Mrs. Barnes for her prize-winning letter of the week.

Dear Mrs. Post: We have operated a card and gift store for the past ten years and understand why some children grow up without respect for another person's property.

Children come into the store eating ice cream cones, potato chips, soft drinks, etc. When the ice cream melts and lands on a card, we have to dispose of it. Hands are greasy from potato chips and when children pick up the cards, they get them dirty. Other people do not care to have their cards decorated with ice cream or potato chip grease, so these cards, too, have to be thrown out. The mother may finally select a twenty-five cent card; in the meantime, the children have ruined a couple of dollars worth.

The attachments on cards fascinate the children so they pull them off, which leaves the cards worthless. If we ask the children not to handle the merchandise the parents will say, "We don't have to buy from you, there are plenty of other places where we can spend our money." The child hears this and thinks he was blameless.

After the parent makes his selection and the child wants to look at the card the parent will remark, "No, you can't hold the card, you will get it dirty." It's a different thing after the purchase has been made.

Perhaps you can get the message across better than I. —June Barnes

Removing Obvious Manufacturer's Labels

Dear Mrs. Post: Should the brand name labels be removed from the inside of expensive German crystal ashtrays? —Donna

Dear Donna: Yes. It is not in good taste to advertise how much money you spend, and leaving a label on anything, indicating that the article was very expensive, can only say "Look how much I paid for this!" A label which does not show, such as a dress designer's label, is left on for practical reasons — resale value, etc.

Brauer - Dart Nuptials Are Told

St. Mary's Church, Kingston, was the setting of the wedding of Miss Joan Marilyn Brauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brauer, 27 West O'Reilly Street, Kingston, and Francis Robert Dart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dart, 178 Third Avenue, Kingston, on Saturday, Sept. 13.

The Rev. Edward Farrelly officiated at the double ring ceremony. Theodore Riccobono, organist, accompanied Mrs. Peter Mancuso who sang traditional wedding selections. Baskets of white gladioli decorated the altar.

The chapel length train was also bordered with lace and the silk illusion veil was shirred to a double crown of seed pearls and aurora crystals. She carried a colonial bouquet of white marguerites and gypsophila, tied with white satin ribbon.

Alaska's Oil Fields

Who says the frontier has vanished?

It is always out there, somewhere, waiting to challenge man. And man, providing the prize is right, is ever ready to accept the challenge—as he has just done so spectacularly with the voyage of the giant tanker Manhattan.

In an adventure story providing welcome relief from the usual front page diet of crisis and disaster, the Manhattan has crunched its way through the frozen channels across the top of North America to open the Northwest Passage that man has dreamed of, searched for and written about for five centuries.

But the Manhattan's voyage is only part of the big story. Its destination is Alaska's North Slope and the vast new oil fields there which, without a barrel of oil having yet reached the market, have already poured into Alaska's treasury a billion dollars from drilling leases.

And this is only the beginning. Opening up the sea route to move Alaskan oil to East Coast markets is certain to spur the search for and development of other resources locked in the frozen expanse of the Alaskan and Canadian north.

But every silver lining, unfortunately, seems to have its cloud. The cry of Northward Ho! may have rekindled the frontier spirit, but also has raised questions as to the effect on the inhabitants of the land and on the land itself.

Eskimos and Indians, who suspect with some reason that they may end up as the only losers on the new frontier, are protesting the invasion and expropriation of what they regard, legally recorded titles or not, as their territory.

There is also fear that irreparable damage may be done to the Alaskan landscape and wildlife by drilling operations and a planned 800-mile pipeline running from the North Slope to a southern Alaskan port to handle oil shipments to West Coast points. The tundra, once disturbed, could deteriorate rapidly into an Arctic badland. The effect on wildlife, dependent upon it for food, nesting and spawning grounds, could be devastating.

The history of the opening of the West does not offer an encouraging precedent. The Indian was, for the most part, brutally handled, we now admit. In the rush to mine the treasures of the earth and throw up factories, waters were polluted, the land scarred and the air fouled.

Such concerns are not going to halt the opening of the North. The prize is too great. But the old story need not and must not be repeated. Man has the ability to learn from experience and apply the lessons. We can no longer say we do not know what the effects of indiscriminate exploitation may be. We can deal fairly with the native population and we can utilize the land without destroying it.

In Alaska, we have the opportunity to prove we can turn the environment to our own purposes without sacrificing the long-term future to the short-term buck.

Food Stamps Retained

If President Nixon had contemplated scrapping the food stamp program when his revised welfare program is approved, that idea itself has been scrapped. Two Cabinet officers—Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch and Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin—are authority for the statement that food stamps will be retained and dovetailed into the reform package.

This would mean a family of four could have a federal minimum benefit of about $2,350—$1,600 in cash benefits and $750 in food stamps. Total cost of the program per year would be $4 billion for welfare benefits and $1.5 billion in food funds. Should Congress choose to appropriate more food money, the President would not impose a budget ceiling on food spending for the poor.

Last May, the President vigorously appealed to Congress to expand food stamps. Then some of his advisers urged that food stamps be eliminated when the family assistance welfare plan went into effect. But that advice was rejected. The final plan the administration is presenting to Congress makes the food stamps part and parcel of the welfare package.

Under whatever name it is presented, the result will be a guaranteed income plan to the poor. Starting at $5.5 billion, it can balloon endlessly. Its saving grace is that the able-bodied men will be required to work or train for work for the family to get its benefits. In time, costs could be reduced thereby.

Registration Dates

All eligible voters who have or will have moved from the address where they now are registered, even within the same election district, must personally re-register at their polling place. Those who are not registered also are required to do so in order to vote in the November general election.

Registration is important because it is necessary for voting. Voting is important because it is the way for citizens to take a hand in government.

The registration dates are:

Saturday, September 27, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Saturday, October 4, 12 noon to 10 p.m.

David Lawrence Says Senate Minority Leader Has Many Important Duties

WASHINGTON — With all the talk about who shall be named the Minority Leader in the Senate to succeed the late Everett Dirksen, relatively little is said generally about the job itself.

What, for instance, does a Party Leader in Congress do? If he and the President are of the same party, must the elected leader bow to the wishes of the administration and act virtually as a lobbyist for measures it wants to see adopted? Or is a Senate leader really confronted with a task that involves far more — namely, to advance the party program in the Senate by lining up votes and getting acceptable compromises, and to attend leadership meetings at the White House, at which he reports to the President the mood of the lawmakers, and then to carry back to the Senators, often confidentially, the wishes to the Chief Executive?

There are even more important duties for a Minority Leader. He must work with the Majority Leader on scheduled legislation and try to arrange agreements that will expedite the passage of laws deemed to be in the public interest.

Some bills, of course, develop partisan opposition. But most of the measures are nonpartisan in character. How, therefore, must a leader, either of the majority or the minority, operate in the Senate? An informative description of what a Senate Leader has to do was given by the then Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson in an interview in "U. S. News & World Report" on June 27, 1960 — prior to his nomination for the Vice Presidency that year. An excerpt follows:

"Q. Don't you have to know more, really, about the different bills and pieces of legislation than almost any other man in the Senate?"

"A. A good leader should not only know more about the workings of the committee and how the members arrived at the content of the bill, he must also know the problems of each individual state and of each individual Senator."

"Q. Do you do a lot of studying, then?"

"A. Quite a lot. For each bill that is reported, we must have a written report to analyze."

"Q. What is your daily relationship with Senator Dirksen, the Minority Leader, for example?"

"A. Well, after I evaluate the bills on the calendar I ask him to make his recommendations. When I walk into the chamber every morning, he puts on my desk a memorandum stating what he thinks about each bill and what his policy group thinks and what his colleagues think — 'this will be trouble,' 'this will be long debate,' 'this will have relatively little opposition,' and so forth. And he marks the bills on the calendar in blue pencil. I evaluate mine and mark my calendar in red pencil. Then we exchange calendars."

"We have every bill that has been introduced and been considered by a committee evaluated in red and blue, and he knows my opinion and I know his opinion. I would say we spend a third or a fourth of every hour during the legislative day talking to each other and either trying to reach an agreement or to ascertain the points upon which agreement is not possible."

Mr. Johnson pointed out that the leadership task often required 18 to 20 hours a day. Who is best qualified to be a leader? Offhand, it might be said that the person best qualified is someone who has had a great deal of experience in the Senate and with a variety of pieces of legislation. But the personality of the leader has much to do with his effectiveness. Does he know how to listen to another man's point of view? Is he able to work out a compromise that still will meet many of the objectives of an administration's proposed legislation? Some leaders have been highly successful while others have not been as helpful for their respective parties.

One thing is clear. A party leader who attempts to be a "Conservative" or a "Liberal" or a "Moderate" will find it hard to function. For what is most important is not so much what he thinks but what he can do to obtain a "consensus." Congress, to be sure, is an independent body, and while loyalty to party often means cooperation with the President if he is of the same party, there is no rule to govern it. Even a Majority or Minority Leader may find himself differing on occasion with a President from his own party.

Now it's the Belgian franc. Behind the scenes, the free world's currency crisis is taking odd turns. And the unrevealed effect on us has U.S. Treasury officials burning the midnight oil. The Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland, has privately informed the free world's central bankers that Belgium's money is under new extreme selling pressure. The country is small, hardly larger than Maryland but, hardly realized among us, Belgium's currency is a key currency. The Belgian franc is the far-flung foundation of many other monies. And it has been remarkably stable for 20 years.

Its devaluation would drag down the currencies of Luxembourg, the Congo, Burundi and Rwanda. It would also affect the currencies of eight other African countries, including Morocco, and of Spain and even Britain.

In the checkerboard world of international finance the British pound and the French franc continue under heavy selling pressure, and are just above their historic lows. Vital short-term credits to Britain come due this month. Sir Leslie O'Brien, governor of the Bank of England, has asked Washington to renew them. France, in turn, may have to receive an additional standby credit from the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Basically, the underlying strain on Belgium's franc is due to the belated balance-of-payments effect of Belgium's loss of the Congo, which was her great, lush overseas bonanza. The Congo served the Belgian franc as India served the British pound — until England lost India.

But this fundamental is now topped off by a sudden flow out of Belgian francs, much of it into West German marks.

Last November and again this April the Bonn government, although split internally, stood up to the pressures from Washington, London and Paris to revalue

WASHINGTON — President Nixon is carefully assessing whether an abrupt cessation of enemy infiltration may be a peace signal from Hanoi and what the U.S. response should be.

He confided to Republican congressional leaders at their last closed-door meeting that the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into the South had almost ceased during the last two months and that there had been a "marked decline" during the previous months.

"Enemy casualties in recent months have exceeded 'the infiltration rate,'" he told the GOP leaders what he described as "the almost complete cessation" of troop movement down the infiltration routes during the past two months "may be a signal to us. We are trying to assess it."

Thus the President clearly has accepted the State Department's cheerful assessment of enemy infiltration, not the Defense Department's more cautious evaluation.

He stressed, however, that he didn't want to raise false hopes.

"I would not want to indulge in optimism or raise unwarranted hopes," he said. "We are doing everything we can, and we are sending some signals to them."

Such a signal, apparently, was the 36-hour suspension of the B-52 strikes. Insiders say that Henry Kissinger, the President's security adviser, was so elated over the infiltration figures and the prospects of turning the Ho Chi Minh cease-fire into a general de-escalation of the war that he persuaded Nixon to ground the big bombers.

The proposal, however, was never submitted to the State and Defense Departments for evaluation. At these levels, the strategists were more impressed with what was happening on the battlefield than with Hanoi's possible intentions. When the Viet Cong stepped up their attacks, the President resumed the bombing. Afterward, White House aides tried to explain that the 36-hour halt had merely been an on-and-off signal to Hanoi of the possibilities for military de-escalation.

All Nixon told the GOP leaders was that "the bombing will be continued until we get some evidence from Hanoi of reciprocal action."

The President also explained the disagreement between Washington and Saigon over the three-day cease-fire that the communists called to mourn the death of Ho Chi Minh. President Thieu had hesitated to agree to a cease-fire, said Nixon, because it was accompanied by low-level Viet Cong attacks. Nixon confirmed to the congressional leaders that all the fighting during the abortive cease-fire had been initiated by the enemy.

FBI Warning
The FBI has warned President Nixon that left-wing activists, agitators and anarchists are trying to organize massive anti-war demonstrations across the country in October and November.

Their plans have been coordinated with Hanoi, which is seeking to increase the pressure upon the President to end the Vietnam war on communist terms, the FBI charges. The North Vietnamese leaders have been counting upon American public opinion to compel the President to give them a victory at the truce table that they have failed to win on the battlefield.

Aware of this, the President would like to convince Hanoi that the American people will not accept a surrender or a sell-out but will hold firm for a settlement based upon equal concessions by both sides.

He has tried to take the steam out of the anti-war movement by withdrawing troops from Vietnam and scaling down military operations. In a move to placate restive students, he will push next for draft reforms.

He notified Republican congressional leaders, for instance, that he will make a push this year to modify the draft and, eventually, to abolish it. During the interim, he favors a lottery that would select younger men, 19 and 20, at random. He told the GOP leaders that he opposed the philosophy, now guiding most draft boards, that the oldest eligibles should be drafted first.

Significantly, Secretary of Defense Mel Laird joined the President at the closed-door meeting in emphasizing to the congressional leaders that draft reforms are "essential."

Dirksen Successor
President Nixon served sly notice upon congressional leaders the other day that he intends to remain strictly neutral in the intramural scrap for the Senate Republican leadership.

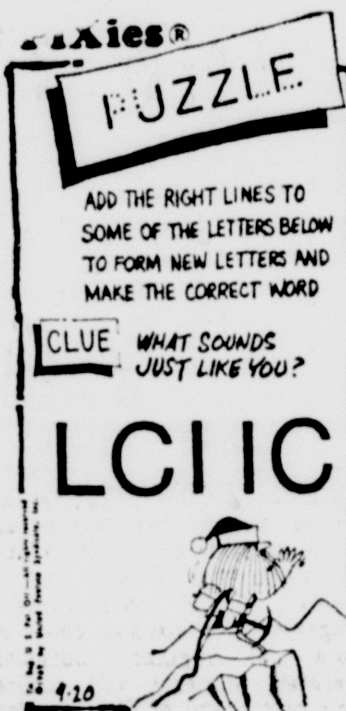

Pennsylvania Sen. Hugh Scott, the front runner, arrived late for the President's background, bipartisan briefing for congressional leaders on troops withdrawals. Scott apologized for his late arrival, hinting that he had been busy politicking in Capitol Hill.

"That's all right, Hugh," said a smiling President. "We're not engaged in the war over the Senate leadership. We're staying out of that one."

Parks for Cities
Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel flew out to California during the President's vacation to sell him on the idea of creating parks and recreation areas close to the big cities, where they would be easily accessible to people from the crowded slums.

He used charts and slides to show the President how the pressures of the cities could be relieved by providing nearby outdoor recreation.

The President was enthusiastic about the idea until he discovered how much it would cost. Land values around the big cities are so high that he has ordered a careful review of the cost of creating outdoor recreation areas for the cities.

Henry J. Taylor Says Belgian Franc Under Assault

Now it's the Belgian franc. Behind the scenes, the free world's currency crisis is taking odd turns. And the unrevealed effect on us has U.S. Treasury officials burning the midnight oil.

The Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland, has privately informed the free world's central bankers that Belgium's money is under new extreme selling pressure. The country is small, hardly larger than Maryland but, hardly realized among us, Belgium's currency is a key currency. The Belgian franc is the far-flung foundation of many other monies. And it has been remarkably stable for 20 years.

Its devaluation would drag down the currencies of Luxembourg, the Congo, Burundi and Rwanda. It would also affect the currencies of eight other African countries, including Morocco, and of Spain and even Britain.

In the checkerboard world of international finance the British pound and the French franc continue under heavy selling pressure, and are just above their historic lows. Vital short-term credits to Britain come due this month. Sir Leslie O'Brien, governor of the Bank of England, has asked Washington to renew them. France, in turn, may have to receive an additional standby credit from the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Basically, the underlying strain on Belgium's franc is due to the belated balance-of-payments effect of Belgium's loss of the Congo, which was her great, lush overseas bonanza. The Congo served the Belgian franc as India served the British pound — until England lost India.

But this fundamental is now topped off by a sudden flow out of Belgian francs, much of it into West German marks.

Last November and again this April the Bonn government, although split internally, stood up to the pressures from Washington, London and Paris to revalue the mark upward. Bonn refused to tolerate revaluation unless it be accompanied by parity readjustments in the American dollar, the pound sterling and the French franc.

Inflation is the dirtiest work in the German political vocabulary. Any change in Germany's currency is somehow regarded as "monkeying with the mark," and kindles abhorrent suspicion.

The West German leaders are totally convinced, and recently told me so in Bonn, that the Germans refuse to be treated any longer as a defeated nation. They know that the free world monetary crisis has not been brought on by Germany but by the financial irresponsibility of other countries. They say it is not the mark which is undervalued but that the dollar, pound and French franc are relatively overvalued. And they refuse to shoulder the burden for other weaknesses. Accordingly, although Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger's coalition cabinet was split, Kiesinger stood up to the pressures from Washington, London and Paris to revalue the mark upward last November and again this past April. In fact, Chancellor Kiesinger told President Nixon on the last visit that nothing would be done one way or the other about the mark until after Germany's September 28 election.

In the April flight alone, when central bankers — and international money speculators — grew mistakenly convinced that Bonn would revalue the mark upward, $2.7 billion of the free world currencies that rushed into the mark took a merciless shelling when the "sure thing" did not happen and went out of the mark. But Belgian francs largely stayed aloof. Now it is different.

For generations the Belgians have been important, and continuous, buyers of Napoleons, the classic French gold piece. In 1914 it was worth 20 French francs. Today, after France's latest devaluation, it is worth 7,840 French francs — an increase of 39,100 per cent.

They know well the nearby tragedy in France and of paper currencies as a whole. Compounding the basic, long-term strain on the Belgian franc due to the loss of the Congo, and facing several current domestic malaises, many Belgians suddenly seem to feel more secure holding their neighbor's marks. In addition, they are lured by at least the possibility that the mark's value may be increased after the German September 23 election.

U.S. Treasury people and other representatives in the International Monetary fund's special group of 19 have a Paris meeting scheduled — for the first time in 20 years — to deal with the undisclosed problem of Belgium's now-assaulted money.

Sept. 21, 1949 — In announcing receipt of a partial list of checks from various organizations totaling more than $1,100, Richard M. Kalish, city chairman of the general emergency polio drive said today response has been very encouraging.

The Big Indian School Building which is now part of Ontario Central School District, was sold for $1,350 at public auction held on Saturday.

Sept. 21, 1959 — Walter A. Black, 54 of 28 Lawrence Street, a former widely known semi-pro baseball pitcher, died Saturday at his home following a long illness.

The Taxpayers Association of Willow, Lake Hill and Shady this week held discussions on a permanent club house and legislative proposals at its meeting held at Mink Hollow Ranch.

Dear Abby

More Haircut Hassles!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1969 by Chicago Tribune
A. V. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Last week I went to Chicago for my nephew's Bar Mitzvah. (I live in New York.) I saw many relatives there I hadn't seen in a long time. One nephew I didn't even recognize. He had a beard like he just came out of the Klondike, and bushy hair, like a girl's. He's not a hippie. He's a real smart college kid. I was shocked, and told him right to his face that I thought he looked disgraceful.

Toward the end of the evening this bearded long-haired nephew came over to me and said, "Uncle Dave, I've been watching you all evening, and you must have smoked a pack of cigarettes. I'll make a deal with you, if you will quit smoking, I'll cut my hair and shave off my beard." Without even thinking I said, "It's a deal!" Then I added one condition. He'd let me "supervise" the haircut. He agreed, and the next morning we went to the barbershop and he got the works.

It's been six days and seven hours since I've had a cigaret, and for a heavy smoke like I was for 35 years, this is rough! But I am going to try my best to keep my part of the bargain.

How do you like that kid doing what he did for his old uncle?

UNCLE DAVE
DEAR UNCLE DAVE: He must love you a lot. Congratulations. But don't "cheat," unless you want your nephew to return to his former image.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to ask "Disgusted," what in your opinion is a NORMAL haircut?

In George Washington's day, men wore their hair shoulder length, usually powdered, and caught in the back with a black ribbon. And George Washington was neither effeminate or abnormal.

Suppose your son were to say to you, "Ma, I wish you'd wear a normal hemline!" Exactly what length would that be?

Styles change constantly, and like it or not, "this too shall pass."

A GRANDMOTHER:
MIDDLEBORO, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: Re all the talk about long hair and beards: My son's hair is moderate, but he did grow a beard while he was in college because he took the part of Macduff in Macbeth and the director was striving for realism and all the male members of the cast were asked to grow their own beards.

Then my son went into the Army, and he had to shave his beard because beards are not allowed in the Army. This is to laugh because one of his forebears served with the Union Army in the Civil War, and HE wore a beard, and I have the photos to prove it.

Now that my son is home again he grew his beard back, and whenever we are out somewhere, someone has to make a comment about his beard. I am in my sixties, and . . . NOT DISTURBED.

MRS. E. L. B.: MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY: I cannot understand all the commotion about whiskers and long hair. My parents were married in 1867, and their wedding picture shows my father, his best man and the minister with long beards and shoulder-length hair, and they were certainly respectable and responsible people.

I have lived well over 90 years, and have seen fads come and go, but I have yet to see one that stirred up such a furor as long hair and whiskers. It seems to me that there is a lot of energy being wasted that could be put to better use.

ONE OLD LADY

DEAR ABBY: Jesus wore long hair, a beard and sandals and I'm sure if He were walking around that way today nobody would call HIM a "hippie." Can you give me a definition of a hippie?

JERRY
DEAR JERRY: No. But if someone can give ME a good definition of a hippie I'll gladly print it.

Crime Pays Below Scale

The title of this article might well be, "Crime sometimes pays but seldom pays well." The game was duplicate and South's four-heart bid was mildly criminal. He should have seen that his hand would probably be just as good as dummy at no-trump as declarer at hearts.

When he looked at the dummy he realized the error of his ways but it was too late to do anything except to try to find a 10th trick. He found it all right. West cashed the king and he had picked up.

queen of spades and shifted to the jack of clubs. South won in dummy, played a trump to his ace and back to dummy's queen and jack. Then he led the jack of spades in an effort to smother the 10.

If the 10 had appeared he would have discarded a club and the nine of spades would have been established as his 10th trick.

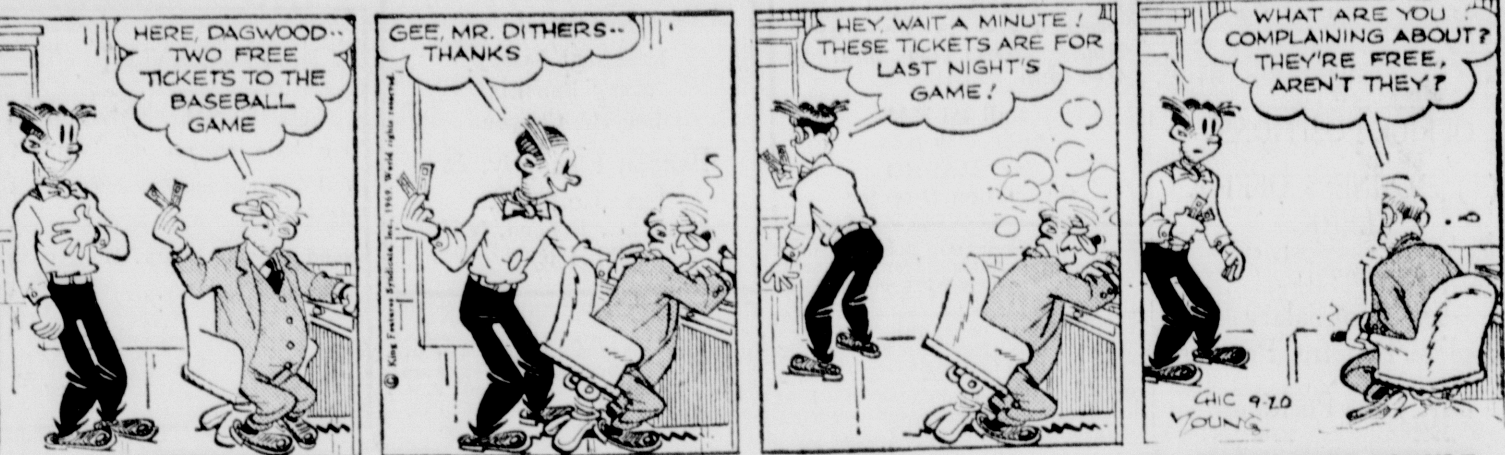

The 10 did not oblige so he trumped. South was still in good shape. He had noted the fall of the queen on the first club lead so obviously West had started with 4-1-2-6 distribution and since he needed the king of diamonds for his opening bid, he was going to be squeeze in three suits. South cashed his last two trumps. West led his 10 of diamonds go on the last trump because he had to hang on to two clubs and the ace of spades. Now South led a diamond to dummy's ace and made his 10th trick with the queen.

South was very happy about the result until he checked the scores and found that most of the three no-trump bidders had managed to scramble a 10th trick by developing an end play against West and that the other four-heart bidders had managed to collect the same 10 tricks he had picked up.

Debbie--Provocative Point

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Debbie Reynolds' return to her NBC-TV series after a one-day walkout brings up a provocative point in view of her protest against a cigarette commercial.

Film stars who switch to television sometimes gloss too easily over the basic differences: in movies, advertisements sell the entertainment. In video, entertainment sells the advertising.

In most cases, the upper hand is clear. In most show-downs, the pendulum swings only one way.

Sources say Miss Reynolds was under heavy pressure to return: from the production company that is her partner in the show, and from the network. A high NBC source says there was fear the sponsor in question, American Brands, might quit the series.

There is no question Miss Reynolds could get any number of other sponsors. But an acquaintance of the star noted such a change would cause severe problems at this time because the series is already shooting, budgets are set and fees assessed.

An NBC source added that sponsor bids at this time would put the network in the position of running a fire sale. It would, he made clear, be a buyer's market, with everyone's cut of the money being affected right on down the line. So the question is whether sponsor and star can reconcile at this point.

Two Sunday Specials

Two CBS-TV specials are on tap for Sunday night. One, a Woody Allen hour, is worth your time. The other, "Royal Family," a 90-minute informal look at Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and their four children, is not.

City Beat

By HUGH REYNOLDS
Freeman City Hall Reporter

ITEM: Common Council meets in executive session with Kingston Cablevision Inc.

Kingstonians aren't too familiar with executive sessions when it comes to their board of aldermen. True, the school board does it once in a while and the county legislature holds a secret session now and then, but for the most part, the Kingston Common Council has exercised an open door policy.

That open door started to swing shut Wednesday night when T. Robert Gallo, president of the Common Council called an "executive session" between the aldermen and representatives of Cablevision.

One shouldn't too quickly begrudge the aldermen their secret sessions. For one thing, a guy can really let his hair down at those meetings. For another, the public only has to know what the politicians want it to know.

The secret sessions, in this case, will continue, according to Gallo, who sets the ground rules for the Council. The company will report back to the aldermen who will study that report and then meet in executive session again to discuss it.

There are those that say there's nothing wrong with Wednesday's meeting since it involved a committee of the Common Council.

Such is not quite the case. There is no official Cablevision Committee of the Common Council although jurisdiction would probably fall under the Laws and Rules Committee.

THERE ALMOST was a special investigating committee of the Council several months ago. At that time, one of the aldermen let it drop at a Council meeting that some members of the city government reportedly weren't paying their full share for Cablevision.

Gallo grabbed that rumor right by the neck and called for an investigating committee, comprised of the entire Common Council, to look into the matter. That was the last anybody heard about it.

But as they say, it isn't the money, it's the principle. The question here is will these secret sessions continue? The aldermen, as they are want to point out, are public servants. Public servants meeting in private session on public matters?

Mr. Gallo has set a dangerous precedent. The Kingston Common Council is a public body. It should meet in public.

CITY BITS—Residents of the Block Park area are once again getting the "we'll look into it" routine from city officials regarding the junkyard across the street from the park. City officials are also "looking into" vacant houses on Abel Street with no windows or doors, an open invitation to disaster to the many children in the area. Hopefully, election year jitters may shake up the city fathers.

INSIDE LINE says that Jim Thompson will wind up as the replacement for Tom Rieley on the Republican legislative ticket in the city. Rieley has to move about out of town due to his new job. Some GOPers weren't too happy with Cliff Bunting's last minute decision to make a run for the post Rieley is vacating. Word has it that Cliff came to the decision around 4 o'clock of the afternoon that the committeemen met to pick a replacement. The fact that Thompson and Bunting were running mates for mayor and alderman at-large this past May also makes it a bit awkward.

TRIAL TIME—Judge Mino made it quite clear that politics would play no part in his court concerning the Tyrrell eviction trial on Friday. The judge even remarked that he had never seen the press cover an eviction trial before. It now appears that Tyrrell had no intention of publicizing the eviction case but a leak to a local newsman forced his hand. He couldn't let the eviction thing go unanswered, thus his blast against the Democrats playing politics. A good offense may be the best defense.

CANDID CANDIDATE—Burton Davis, GOP candidate for alderman-at-large on honesty—"I've found it's easier to tell the truth, especially if you have a bad memory. If you tell the truth you only have to tell it one way. It's a lot less trouble in the long run."

Capitol Collapse Feared: Emergency Funds Passed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Spurred by grim warnings the Capitol could collapse any moment, the House has approved $2 million to plan a controversial remodeling job.

The entire project, to cost at least $45 million, would not only add a new east wall to the Capitol but would include about 100 new offices, four restaurants, two auditoriums, escalators and several public restrooms.

"Let us put this last grand touch on the Capitol," said Rep. Fred Schwengel, R-Iowa, a staunch supporter of the project, during a debate that found opponents badly outgunned.

Leaders of both parties applied their power and produced photographs and architects' reports indicating the 150-old sandstone west wall is showing its age.

"I can't say it will collapse today," said Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass. "But I can't say it won't. If it should collapse it would have a tremendous adverse effect on public opinion."

Besides having the biggest guns, proponents of the plan had the most time to give their views. Of the two hours allotted for debate, only eight minutes went to an opponent, Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y.

"Everyone recognizes that something has to be done," said Stratton, "but do we really need anything this elaborate? Is the only way to save the west front to have this incredible 4½-acre expansion?"

Stratton, who favors restoration of the wall in place to preserve the original architecture, said the cost of the expansion project would make it the most expensive building ever constructed.

"In this Congress, we have already done a number of things in our own interests," he said. "We've raised our pay, increased our staffs, and boosted our retirement benefits. Do we really need to pay this enormous sum to create 58 hideaway offices for ourselves? That is the question."

The members all have offices in the three big buildings across the street but it is a sign of status to have another office in the Capitol to slip into during weary debates.

Stratton offered an amendment to eliminate $2 million requested for drawing plans for the project and to appropriate instead $100,000 for an engineering study to see if restoration in place is feasible. But he lost, 92-59, on a non-record vote.

There is considerable opposition to the expansion project in the Senate, which must still act on the request. Three years ago the House also approved funds to start the project but the Senate knocked them out.

At that time it was understood the project would be pigeonholed until the Vietnam War ended and the budget pinch eased.

But a sudden request from McCormack a few weeks ago produced the legislation.

School Safety Still an Issue In Sixth Ward

Brendon D. Alexander, Republican Conservative candidate for alderman in the Sixth Ward today again took to task his opponent for his complete lack of interest in the problems of the people in his Ward.

Alexander stated: "Empty promises and false statements do not make a safer route for children to walk to school, but this seems to be the only constructive means my opponent has, in regard to the 'Colonial Gardens' area problem."

Alexander is running against Donald E. Quick.

"Over two weeks ago, my opponent stated to the press that work would be started within this lapsed period. Nothing has been done—this lack of interest and sincerity is appalling, to myself and the worried parents of these children, whose safety and welfare are of prime concern."

Alexander continued: "A do nothing—ignore it—policy places these children in jeopardy every day, heaping unnecessary worry on the parents, who, by the lack of action on the part of my opponent, would feel they are being treated as second class citizens. As a parent I am in complete sympathy and understanding with these troubled people—they are trying to protect their children."

Alexander concluded: "What is needed here is immediate sincere action, with positive results. Make a safe route for the children to go to school and keep it that way."

Berets Want Murder Trial in States

LONG BINH, Vietnam (AP)—Six Green Beret officers awaiting trial for the alleged slaying of a Vietnamese double agent jogged for nearly two miles today and joked with newsmen, but declined to discuss their case.

However, a military attorney for Col. Robert B. Rheault, 43, of Vineyard Haven, Mass., former commander of the 3,000 Special Forces troops in Vietnam, said Edward Bennett Williams, one of America's top criminal lawyers, will come to Saigon to prepare his defense.

And attorneys for two of Rheault's staff officers presented a petition at the White House Friday appealing to President Nixon to intervene and shift the case to the United States. The attorneys—Guy Scott of Atlanta, Ga., and Robert McKinley of Newark, N.J.—said their clients could not get a fair trial in Vietnam because Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander in Vietnam, and Maj. Gen. G. L. Mabry, commander of U.S. support troops, "are prejudiced because they have prejudged the defendants."

The two attorneys represent Capt. Robert F. Marasco of Bloomfield, N.J., and Capt. Budge E. Williams of Athens, Ga.

The Army announced Thursday that Marasco and Williams together with Capt. Leland J. Brumley of Duncan, Okla. will go before a general court-martial in about three weeks. Then Rheault and Majors Thomas C. Middleton and Jefferson S.C., and David E. Crews of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will be tried.

An Army spokesman indicated the second court-martial might not be held.

"If the first three are acquitted and there is no new evidence, it is possible the others may never come to trial, the spokesman said. "If there is new evidence it might go the other way."

The six officers are charged with murder and conspiracy to commit murder. The maximum sentence is life in prison.

Rheault's military attorney said he did not know when Williams would arrive in Saigon to begin the defense preparations. Williams over the years has represented such famous persons as James R. Hoffa, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell and Bobby Baker. He has a good record of winning acquittals.

The six officers appeared to be in good spirits today as they began the two-mile run they make every morning. Rheault, an ash blond, told photographers, "My wife is getting worried about me. She says I look like I've turned gray since all this started. Couldn't you guys retouch the photos?"

Originally eight Green Berets were arrested in the case, but charges against two—CWO Edward M. Boyle of New York City and Sgt. I.C. Alvin L. Smith, Jr., of Naples, Fla.—were held in abeyance.

Sources said the two have been offered immunity to testify for the prosecution. They have been released from confinement but must remain on this post, 15 miles from Saigon, on a "parole status," an Army spokesman said.

The six officers who will stand trial are accused of slaying Thai Khach Chuyen, a Vietnamese man who, according to various sources, was working as an espionage agent for both the allies and the Communist command. He allegedly was killed June 20 and his weighted body dumped in the South China Sea. The body has not been recovered.

Nasser Wants Recall Of Soviet Ambassador

By United Press International—Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser has demanded the recall of Soviet Ambassador Sergei A. Vinogradov, one of the Kremlin's leading envoys, informed diplomatic sources said today.

The sources in Beirut said Nasser is trying to emphasize his annoyance with what he considers Soviet interference in Egypt's military campaign with Israel. The Soviets are believed to have been alarmed at what they consider Egypt's increasing belligerence.

One such example was Egypt's recent 100-plane raid against Israeli positions in the Sinai Desert.

Some reports said recently Nasser appealed to the Soviet to reduce their staff of technicians and experts in his country but they refused.

Vinogradov, 61, is regarded in diplomatic circles as the dean of Soviet diplomats and perhaps next in line for foreign minister.

In Amman, reliable semi-official sources said today Jordan had broken up an Israeli sabotage ring and a secret court had sentenced seven Arabs to long prison terms. The sources said the Arabs were trained by Israeli intelligence.

In Cairo, the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said today President Nixon's speech to the United Nations proved the United States is on Israel's side in the Middle East crisis.

U.S. Posture Hit—It said the speech hurt prospects for success in four-power Middle East talks.

"The U.S. alignment with the Israeli viewpoint carries the threat of further escalating the (Arab-Israeli) confrontation and doubles the dangers of an explosion whose effect certainly would go beyond the Middle East," Al-Ahram said.

In Jerusalem, Arab leaders warned that if Israel severely restricts freedoms in its occupied territories it only will help Arab guerrillas. Arab spokesmen said they feared restrictions imposed in the town of Hebron foreshadowed a tough Israeli crackdown in occupied lands.

Arabs Warn Israel—"If this is their way of trying to get cooperation, they are going about it the wrong way," one Arab source in Jerusalem said.

"All this is going to push the people of Hebron into the arms of Al-Fatah," he said. Al-Fatah is a leading Arab guerrilla organization.

The new restrictions on Hebron, on the west bank of the Jordan River, put 100,000 Arabs under what amounts to a stage of siege. They were forbidden to go to any other part of the occupied territory or to Jerusalem or cross the Jordan River.

Israel said the restrictions were imposed because of increasing attacks on Israeli troops in the area.

Elbrick on Kidnap: Sees More of Same

GIBERTSVILLE, N.Y. (AP)

—The U.S. Ambassador to Brazil, who feared for his life when he was kidnaped earlier this month, said Friday that American diplomats may see increasing attempts to abduct them.

Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick, resting at home in this upstate village, said, "It's something you can expect to spread in the same way the plane hijackings have spread."

"The youth of the world," Elbrick asserted, "has found that they have a weapon—violence—and since America is such a powerful economic country and a capitalist country, we have become the natural enemies for the same type of revolutionaries who kidnaped me."

"This is something that is happening all over the world, not just in South America," he said.

Elbrick was kidnaped in Rio de Janeiro Sept. 4 and held until the Brazilian government released 15 so-called political prisoners.

He said he feared for his life during his imprisonment in a 9x12 room that contained only a cot and stool and bare lightbulb. "It's something I'll never forget," he said of the ordeal. "I was never sure I would get home. I was afraid they would shoot me. The incident in Guatemala, when the ambassador was machine-gunned, was running through my mind."

He referred to the killing in 1968 of the U.S. ambassador to Guatemala who was shot trying to escape from would-be kidnapers.

Elbrick said his abductors were followers of Chinese Communism. "Intelligent fanatics who believe the only way they can achieve their results is through violent revolution."

"They sounded like Mao Tse Tung communists," he said. When I asked my guards to give me something to read, they gave me an English printing of Ho Chi Minh's sayings."

His captors told him "You are guards," he said, "but we can't just a pawn for us. We are us—stop helping people."
